Subject: CEAT Sponsorship of Event Headed by Sri Lankan Alleged War Criminal.

Dear Sirs,

We would like to draw your attention to the sponsorship that CEAT has reportedly given to the "Gajaba Super Cross 2017" last month in Sri Lanka, according to local media¹. We believe this may be in violation of your company's corporate social responsibility principles though there is very little information on your webpage about what they are for a post conflict country like Sri Lanka.

As you can see from the Sri Lankan media, this sporting event is presided over by Shavendra Silva, who is allegedly Sri Lanka's most notorious war criminal. Moreover his Gajaba Regiment, which organised the event, has been implicated in alleged war crimes and violations dating back decades². Shavendra Silva is reported in the state run newspaper of Sri Lanka to be the head of the Gajaba Supercross Steering Committee³ and he is shown prominently in the photographs promoting the event and receiving your cheque⁴. Moreover the media in Sri Lanka has quoted Major General Silva as saying the funds raised by the championship will be used to help the families of the Gajaba Regiment's "heroes"⁵.

In reality this sporting event is an utter affront to Tamil war survivors who still live in poverty and without any accountability for extensive war crimes, including the shelling of civilian objects, torture, summary execution and enforced disappearance committed inter alia by the 58 Division during the final phase of the civil war in 2008-9 when it was under Shavendra Silva's command.

I would like to draw your attention to the United Nations Report of the OHCHR Investigation on Sri Lanka (OISL, 2015, A/HRC/30/CRP.2), which clearly states Shavendra Silva commanded the 58 Division (para 116). The OISL report repeatedly references the 58 Division in connection with alleged violations, such as killing of surrendees (para 287 onwards) torture (para 544), shelling of UN sites and hospitals (para 794 onwards, 804, 840, 846 [which names Silva], 873, 875).

The OISL report, mandated by the Human Rights Council, used the standard of "reasonable grounds to believe" that an incident occurred when there was sufficiently corroborated information. This constitutes a prima facie basis to indict someone in a court of law and should therefore be a reasonable threshold for your company to reconsider its support to this project.

It is perhaps pertinent to add that Major General Silva reported directly to General Jagath Jayasuriya during the end of the civil war in Sri Lanka; the ITJP has recently filed a lawsuit against General Jayasuriya in Latin America where he was based as a diplomat in connection with his command position in 2008-9.

In addition, Shavendra Silva's alleged role in war crimes has been extensively reported in the media for many years. The former UN High Commissioner for Human Rights, Navi Pillay, reportedly wrote to the UN Secretary General in 2012 raising concerns about Silva being an alleged war criminal⁶. A war crimes lawsuit was filed against Silva in New York in 2011⁷ and failed because he had diplomatic immunity. A South African NGO threatened litigation when it was reported that Silva was to be posted as deputy Ambassador to their country⁸.

What is most surprising is that CEAT Sri Lanka Deputy General Manager Bishri Latif in Colombo thought it acceptable to sponsor an event so closely linked to Shavendra Silva and the Gajaba Regiment.

We urge you to examine the reports we have referenced and revert to us if you have any queries. We are a small human rights organisation that specialises in documenting testimony of war and torture survivors who have fled Sri Lanka to Europe, some of whom can directly implicate Shavendra Silva in knowledge of alleged crimes by his subordinates such as summary execution, torture, rape and enforced disappearance. The survivors we deal with are extremely traumatised, often suicidal, and are still struggling 8 years after the civil war ended in Sri Lanka, to reunite with family and restart their lives. I hope you can imagine what an insult it is to them to see a company like yours sponsor the Sri Lankan military regiment and commander allegedly responsible for ruining their lives.

We humbly suggest CEAT take the following steps:

1. Cancel all sponsorship for military events in Sri Lanka, and in particular those involving Shavendra Silva and the Gajaba Regiment.
2. Investigate how local CEAT local officials in Colombo endorsed this sponsorship and take disciplinary action.
3. Apologise to the victims, including those who have fled the country.

Yours Sincerely,

Yasmin Sooka
ITJP Executive Director
